One day not so long ago, Farmer Al Falfa and his dog Roscoe were having a lot of sport, playing a daring game of checkers. Roscoe was just about the last word in checker playing, in fact he did his stuff blind-folded, and managed to keep the farmer pretty busy at that.

At just this same moment, Angelia the farmer's pet cat was just finishing a bath in the river nearby, and all covered with water, she comes on to her master and little Roscoe, she decides to use the vacant part of Al's shirt to dry himself with.

Then this selfsame cat starts out to promote egg laying among the farmer's hens, and plays the piano as encouragment. All of the hens and ducks become annoyed and start throwing eggs at little Angelia. The farmer happens along just as she is trying to sneak out of the henhouse with an egg.

The farmer becomes real sore at his darling little pet and makes up his mind to put her out of the way. First he tries just plain dynamite, the old standoy the burlap bag with rocks to hold her at the bottom of the river. Buteach time Angelia comes up.smiling. Farmer Al tries to get Roscoe dog to fight her to a finish, but Roscoe and Angelia are too good pals for that. So they have a drink together.

Then old farmer Al grabs the cat and rushes over to the armory stuffs her into a cannon and fires it up into the sky. Angelia flies away up in the clouds. All of this starts a commotion in the Heavens and it starts right in raining cats and dogs. Then the farmer has more trouble than before. Aesop says: "There's more than one way to get rid of a cat, but none of them are any good"
